Q1. I am a registered dealer. Am I bound to pay tax under RCM if I make any purchases from un-registered dealer?

Ans. Yes, any registered dealer who has purchased goods from an un-registered dealer needs to pay tax to the government in following cases:

- a) Total daily expense is greater than Rs. 5,000 from un-registered dealer except compulsory services like Legal/Transporter Services.
  - b) Import of Services
  - c) Compulsory RCM services like Legal Services/Transporter Services if taken from a registered/unregistered dealer.

Q2. What if I make purchases from registered dealer, in that case also I am bound to pay RCM?

Ans. NO. RCM is to be paid only if you have made purchases from an un-registered dealer (except compulsory services like transporters and lawyers). In case of compulsory services RCM is always to be paid even if purchased from registered dealer.

Q3. My purchase for office expenses includes purchase from both registered as well as un-registered dealers?

Ans. In such a case, you need to pay RCM only for the purchases made from un-registered dealer.

Q4. How much percent of tax amount can I claim as Input Tax Credit?

Ans. You will get 100% ITC claim for the tax paid under RCM. However there are certain expenses such as Food & Beverages, Cab rental, Club membership on which you will not get ITC claim for the RCM paid. Otherwise, you will get ITC on most of the expenses made.

Q5. What will government get, if I am getting 100% ITC on RCM amount?

Ans. This is done by government, only to decrease the degree of un-registered purchases and to cover maximum number of people under GST net.

Q6. I have made office expense of Rs. 6000 on groceries from Big Bazaar. Do I need to pay RCM for this transaction?

Ans. NO, since Big Bazaar or any other such big store must be a registered dealer so you need not pay RCM for this expense.

Q7. I have purchased office stationery of Rs. 5500 from a shopkeeper who does not have GSTIN. Do I need to pay RCM?

Ans. YES, as you have made a purchase from an un-registered dealer, you must pay RCM for it.

Q8. I have purchased office stationery of Rs. 3000 from an un-registered dealer. Do I need to pay RCM for it?

Ans. If there is no other un-registered purchase on that day apart from this transaction then you need not pay RCM to the government. However, if there are some more transactions on that particular day from un-registered dealers and consolidated expense reaches more than Rs. 5000 then you are required to pay RCM to the government.

Q9. I have purchased office stationery from un-registered dealer which included Ball Pens taxable at 12% and Registers & Letter Pads, taxable at 18% in single bill? How do I pay RCM for it?

Ans. You need to calculate tax @12% on amount spent on Ball Pens and tax @18% on amount spent on Registers & Letter pads and then pay RCM to the government.

Q10. I have made office expense for items phenyl, soaps & detergents from registered dealer (on which GST is charged). Do I need to pay RCM on it?

Ans. NO, since it is a purchase from registered dealer, you need not pay RCM for it.

Q11. I have made expense on food & beverage from a restaurant and the bill included GST. Do I need to pay RCM for it?

Ans. NO, since it is treated as purchase from registered dealer, you need not pay RCM for it. However you will not get input credit on it.

Q12. I have made food & beverages expense from a small hotel/dhaba & bill does not include GST. Is this bill liable for RCM?

Ans. YES, since you have made a purchase from un-registered dealer, this bill is liable for RCM with no input credit.

Q13. I have paid telephone expense for my office. Do I need to pay RCM on it?

Ans. NO, since the payment already included the GST amount and you have made payment to a registered dealer, so you are not required to pay RCM for it.

Q14. I have made expense on airplane / rail tickets for my office employees? Do I need to pay RCM for it?

Ans. NO.
